

Jesse

Oh Jesse, you better start thinkin about saving your neck Oh Jesse, you put on that leather jacket like you put on respect you got cleats on your boots and a woman who shoots everytime you shuffle out the stage door
And darling Jesse, do you know what its all for?
Ah Jesse, your manager brought by them eight by ten glossies of your band Oh Jesse, he says you wear cross around your neck and come on with nails in your hands
With your insides showing and your New York band blowin them old Chicago blues
Ah Jesse, cant you see youre the one Jesse Ah Sonny, this time its you Well Jesse, your child is slobbering all over your pants
And Jesse, your wife has fallen into a trance Shes got eyes that tell no lies Shes seen so many wars
Ah be a good boy Jesse, tell her she dont have to look no more.
Well Jesse, he knows all the tricks to get the crowd reeling Oh and Jesse, ya he rocks em with that old soul feeling And he walks off the stage in a self-adoring haze and gets shoved right out the door Whoa Jesse, cant you see now boy that thats what its all about Jesse Not even time to do that old played out encore Whoa Jesse